The Judicial Conference of the United States is the principal policy making body concerned with the administration of the United States Courts. The specific duties of the Judicial Conference include surveying the conditions of business in the courts of the United States, preparing plans for the assignment of judges to or from courts of appeals or district courts, promoting uniformity of management procedures and the expeditious conduct of court business, the reviewing of circuit council conduct and disability orders, and carrying on a continuous study of the operation and effect of general rules of practice and procedure in use within the federal courts. In addition, the Judicial Conference supervises the Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts and operates through a network of committees created to address and advise on a variety of subjects dealing with administration of the courts. The Chief Justice of the United States is the presiding officer of the conference. Membership is comprised of the chief judges of each judicial circuit, the chief judge of the Court of International Trade, and a district judge from each regional judicial circuit. A circuit chief judge's term on the conference is concurrent with his or her term as chief judge of the circuit, seven years or until seventy years of age, whichever comes first. District judge representatives are elected for terms of not less than three nor more than five successive years, as established by majority vote of all circuit and district judges of their circuit. Terms on the conference of elected members are effective and expire on October 1 of any given year. The Director of the Administrative Office of the United States Courts serves as the Judicial Conference Secretary.
