The United States Tax Court exercises jurisdiction as provided in title 26 of the U.S. code over matters involving Federal taxation, providing a forum in which taxpayers may dispute determinations made by the Internal Revenue Service. The court is composed of 19 judges appointed to 15-year terms by the President with the advice and consent of the Senate; senior judges; and special trial judges (appointed by the Chief Judge and authorized by statute to decide particular categories of cases). Court proceedings take place on the record and are open to the public. Decisions by the court are generally appealable to the United States Courts of Appeals serving the geographic area in which the individual taxpayer resides or the corporate taxpayer has its principle place of business.
